

Students in Residential Programs Taking Online Courses

Students in residential programs may take online courses but on campus courses must account for at least half of their coursework. Online courses don't count towards the residency requirement. Information on tuition and fees can be found on the Bursar website.

Rationale: Programs that allow students to complete more than 50% of their coursework online are basically operating as Hybrid or Online programs without approval. In the Graduate Studies Office we have noticed programs not adhering to this and thought a clarifying statement would be helpful.